NOTICE is hereby given that a Court will be held pursuant to the Ontario Voters' Lists Act by His Honour the Judge of the County Court of the County of Lennox and Addington, at the town hall, in the Village of Tamworth, on FRIDAY the 4th DAY OF OCTOBER, 1912, at 9 o'clock

THE LENNOX FALL SHOW

The Fair this year gave promise of being an exceptionally good one in every way and as far as the exhibits went was one of the best in some years. In the palace the display of grain, fruit and vegetables were splendid both in quantity and quality.

In ladies' work the display was fully up to the average and proved a drawing point for the fair sex.

In homemade bread, buns, pickles and preserved fruits there was a lavish display and the judges had considerable trouble in placing the awards among so many first class exhibits. The special prizes also drew a large number of exhibits in this class.

Among the merchant's displays, that of the Seymour Power Co. attracted the most attention. Manager Walters and his staff worked for some days and expended much thought on the display, which was a credit to their efforts. Besides a display of beautiful lighting fixtures there was shown a motor for running sewing machines, a motor for farm use in churning, cutting roots, turning cream separator or any other class of farm work requiring power also an ordinary motor and an electric pump. Probably the most attractive part of the exhibit was the household utensils, complete electric cook stove, electric irons, toasters, broilers, heaters, cooking or heating plates and electric washing machine and wringer. The company had also a display of gas stoves and water heaters.

Mr. M. S. Madole had a splendid display of ranges, heaters, tools of every description, hanging lamps and all the various goods which are to be found in an exceptionally well equipped hardware store.

Mr. F. W. Vandused had a large and varied assortment of lap rugs, robes, blankets, harness and all the various articles used around horses and carriages. A unique feature of his exhibit was a small aeroplane suspended from the ceiling over the exhibit.

Mr. M. W. Simpkins exhibited one of his popular steel ranges and an assortment of aluminium kitchen ware.

Mr. J. W. Courtney, Newburgh, had an attractive exhibit of tanning products, tanned rugs, leather and etc.

The Gibbard Furniture Co. had an exhibit of a few beautiful samples of furniture, merely enough to show the workmanship and finish of the high class Furniture produced by the Company.

Messrs. Weiss Bros. had an attractive display of shoes, trunks and travelling goods but in so small a space were able to show but a few samples of the many attractive lines of footwear and travelling goods carried by the firm.

The exhibits of poultry were the largest and the best in some years. In live stock the classes were all well filled with the exception of Jersey cattle. The horses exhibited were a particularly fine lot.

The fire chiefs of Ontario will hold their annual convention of 1913 in Kingston. This was decided upon at the closing session of this year's convention, which convened at Woodstock.

John Cummings, who shot his wife in Montreal, and is doomed to die on November 4th, has twice attempted suicide, his last attempt being made when he dashed his head on the stone floor of his cell.

During August eighty-eight workmen were killed through industrial accidents and three hundred and five injured. The largest number of fatalities occurred in the building trades and in the steam railway service.

The Canadian Talc and Silica company, which owns a talc mine and mill at Eldorado, has purchased a property just east of the village of Madoc, owned by J. H. Curley, and known as the Conley property. The president of the company is H. Hungerford, of Chicago. The intentions of the company regarding the newly-acquired deposit are not made known, but current reports state that another mill will be erected in Madoc and ground talc shipped from there.

The god of action has at last smiled on the operations of the new hotel, Kingston. The latest news from the authorities in this connection is that not more than a week should go by now before the work will be begun. The Boston end is ready and the bonds are being printed. As soon as this work is done the building will commence. Dr. Edward Ryan said on Monday that the thing had hung so long that he did not want to say anything about it but it was assured that the beginning was at hand.—Kingston Whig.

A battery of artillery, to be known as the 34th, has been organized in Belleville. Guns have been secured and the officers' quarters of the old drill hall will be placed in shape for the new military organization. A child belonging to David Morden, of Hillier, near Allisonville, met with a trying experience the other day. The youngster climbed up in a seed drill, the box of which was open and crawled in, the cover falling down and holding the child fast with no room to turn. Its cries for some time were not heard. At last a woman passing heard the noise and after an investigation found it. The child, when taken from the box, was wet with perspiration and after being taken to its home had to be worked with for some time before it was revived.

T. Parks and J. Tye. of the Angus Sinclair construction gang, met with a painful accident at Newburgh on Sunday. While starting a fire in one of the engines an explosion of coal gas ignited a can of oil which in turn exploded, and blew the two men out of the cab. Mr. Parks was enveloped in a ball of fire when he struck the ground, and if it had not been for the prompt action of those near he would have been burned to death. As it was he was badly burned and had some of his ribs broken. Mr. Tye escaped with a few painful bruises. Mr. Parks was taken to Belleville hospital.

Michael Rouse, of Bancroft, a patient at Rockwood hospital, Kingston, was found hanging dead in a tree on the grounds on Sunday. The man had been confined to the institution for some little time, and on Sept. 8th he made his escape from his place of confinement. All the while the authorities had been looking for the missing man, but it was not until Sunday that he was located. One of the men at the institution had occasion to go to a certain part of the grounds and happened to look up into a tree. To his astonishment he noticed the missing man hanging to a limb with a rope around his neck. The body was in a bad condition.

Hydro-electric engineers have been preparing to make a test of the water
 at Glenora, Lake on the mountain, Prince Edward county, to ascertain to what extent permanent power is there.
 A channel 12 feet wide and one foot deep was made through the bank and the water was allowed to run through this channel and its natural course to the Bay of Quinte below. The water was allowed to run for twelve hours.
 Another dam was constructed across the channel, and the water in the lake was lowered 1½ inches in twelve hours.
 When the flow was stopped the water rose ½ inch in twelve hours, although a strong wind from the southwest blew while the water was running, thus raising the water at the weir to its highest level. The lake is now being surveyed to discover the amount of water it contains. The engineers are reporting on the result to the hydro-electric commission.

This matter being put over until Wednesday, Justice Goff called successively into his chambers Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, Sergt. Young, his secretary, and Detectives Yunge, Myers, Cassassa and McKenna, all of whom were members of the police squad that took "Gyp" and "Lefty" into custody. These were all questioned by the justice and Mr. Moss. What they told was not revealed, but it was learned that Commissioner Dougherty turned over to Justice Goff a box containing papers, memoranda and other documents found in the gunmen's flat, which Mr. Moss said last night had furnished the prosecution "some evidence of importance."

Included in this evidence, Mr. Moss said, were clues by which he hoped to establish the identity of the persons who supplied the gunmen with funds to maintain existence. It was reported yesterday, however, that forty letters containing incriminating references to the Rosenthal murder had been found in the flat, and although Deputy Commissioner Dougherty indignantly denied that any such missives had been discovered, Mr. Moss declared last night that he proposed to have the truth or falsity of the report legally established before the justice.

Another matter which, the prosecutor said, was being investigated, was whether the police examined the two gunmen and their wives at any time before the arrival of Mr. Moss at police headquarters Saturday night. In this connection the district attorney has learned that, contrary to the story told by the police that they "burst into" the apartment, there were no signs on the door of the gunmen's flat that force had been used.

The two young wives of the prisoners, held in $2,500 bail as material witnesses, involved themselves in contradictions, Mr. Moss said last night, when he questioned them separately yesterday as to what they knew of the murder. He was convinced, he said, that they could tell more than they had thus far revealed.

Max Kahn, who was also held as a material witness, to-day may face a serious charge, Mr. Moss said further. Kahn was identified in court yesterday by Grese, the waiter, who has made several other important identifications, as having been near the Hotel Metropole at the time of the murder. The prosecutor indicated that he would lay before the grand jury on Thursday, evidence bearing upon Kahn's conduct from the date of the murder to the date of his arrest.

Gunmen Remanded.

New York, Sept. 17.—Harry Horowitz, alias "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty" Louis Rosenweig, whose arrests on Saturday night completed the round-up of the gunmen indicted for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, were arraigned yesterday morning before Justice Goff in the supreme court. At the request of counsel for the prisoners pleading was adjourned until Sept. 18.

The gunmen's counsel asked to enter tentative pleas of not guilty, with leave to withdraw, but decided to wait until next Wednesday before pleading. The wives of the prisoners and Max Kahn, the alleged pickpocket, arrested in the flat occupied by the Wheat Exceed Flour Rates.

Buffalo, Sept. 17.—That the trunk lines are charging a higher rate for the shipment of wheat than for flour is the substance of a complaint under investigation here yesterday by Special Examiner Mackley, of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Eighteen railroads are defendants in the dispute and the complaining corporation is the Federal Milling Co. of Lockport, N.Y. The specific charge alleges discrimination in favor of the flour manufacturers of Minneapolis and other millers in the northwest.

The railroad rate on wheat from western points to Chicago is nearly two cents higher per hundred pounds than the rate on flour. Inasmuch as wheat is grown west of Chicago, the eastern corporations claim discrimination in favor of the western flour manufacturers.

Edward Kidd, M.P., Dead.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—The death yesterday morning at North Gower of Edward Kidd, M.P. for Carleton, causes the first break by death in the ranks of the Parliament elected a year ago. Mr. Kidd was stricken with paralysis several weeks ago. He was born on Sept. 9, 1849, in Grenville County, of Irish parentage, and followed the pursuit of agriculture from youth, being latterly in the cheese industry. He was returned to Parliament in 1900 and 1904, but resigned in favor of Premier Borden, then leader of the Opposition. Mr. Borden was elected for both Carleton and Halifax in 1908, and chose to set for the latter, and at the bye-election in Carleton Mr. Kidd was again chosen and re-elected in 1911. He was a member of the Church of England and was unmarried.

Are the Fly and Mosquito Dangerous?

The fly, with spongy feet, collects the invisible germs of diseases, spreads them over our food and poisons us with typhoid and cholera. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria and yellow fever. The bacteria of consumption, or grip, are everywhere present for us to breathe into our lungs. The blood which flows through our veins and arteries is our protection. It should contain healthy red and white blood corpuscles—capable of warding off these disease germs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and alterative made entirely without alcohol, a pure glyceric extract of bloodroot, golden seal, Oregon grape root, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, which has enjoyed a good reputation for over forty years. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

I took one bottle of it and the chills vanished. In about a year afterward I felt them coming back so I got another bottle and have never had any symptoms of fever or ague since. That is all of twenty years ago, for I had the chills about twelve years before I started to take 'Golden Medical Discovery.'"

SWIFT AND THE BROOMSTICK.

Joke Played by Famous Wit and Satirist Upon Lady Berkeley.

The well-known humorist, Jonathan Swift (1745), was dean of St. Patrick's Church in Dublin. As such, he often visited the wife of his church-patron, Lady Berkeley. This lady always requested Swift, before he went away, to read to her a chapter from her favorite book of devotion, Meditations, by Boyle. This was a task entirely incompatible with Swift's indelible humor. He was determined to take revenge on Boyle, whom he disliked very much on account of the tiresome 15 minutes it took to read the chapter from his book. This he did by writing a parody on Boyle's treatment of a popular subject. The title of this parody was Devotional Meditations on a Broomstick, and he had it printed on exactly the same kind of paper, with the same type, and the same size as Boyle's book. These he pasted, when his patroness had left the room, very skillfully between the pages of the book.

When the time for his departure came, the lady, as usual, requested Swift to read to her a chapter from Boyle. Swift opened the book at the correct page, and read with the greatest seriousness and a solemn face, the title, Devotional Meditations on a Broomstick.

The lady interrupted him. "Please, Mr. Swift," she said, "no bad jokes with me."

"Jokes? I assure you, my lady, I am not joking; I read as it is printed here. You can see for yourself." He handed her the book and she read, Devotional Meditations on a Broomstick.

"Sure enough," said the lady, "there it is. But I can't understand it. I have never seen that chapter. A remarkable subject. I must say. But read it to me. Boyle is so full of deep thoughts, that I think he can make that subject very devotional, even if the title sounds so strange."

And Swift read with great seriousness his original comparison of man with a broomstick. With great eloquence the words came from his lips: "And this broomstick, that stands so despoised in the corner, was once a beautiful green blooming decoration of the forest. Do you recognize the conformity with your own fate?"

"Oh, my great incomparable Boyle!" cried the listener. "How admirably he carries out his point! How he makes from an insignificant ob-

MORLEY AND JOURNALISM.

He Has Criticisms to Make Regarding the Modern Press.

What Lord Morley called "a remarkable gathering" met at the Hotel Cecil recently, when Sir Edward Cook was entertained by his fellow-journalists in commemoration of the honor of knighthood which His Majesty has lately been pleased to confer upon him.

Journalists of all schools of thought gathered under the chairmanship of Lord Morley on whose right hand sat the guest of the evening and on whose left was Viscount Milner.

In the course of his speech proposing the health of Sir Edward Cook, Lord Morley said: "I met Ruskin once, and then my idol was Mill. I need hardly say that I never met Ruskin again. (Laughter.) I have often wondered, when looking at what came later, whether we unitarians were not happier, and whether it was not an advantage to know where we really were."

"In these days," said Lord Morley, "the narrator, as apart from the leader-writer or publicist, has grown into enormous prominence. That is a very delicate subject for me to touch upon—but we are now in the Palace of Truth. (Laughter.)"

"It is a question whether the news editor is or is not making an advance on the writer of leading articles. And I would suggest that what we call the 'uncle' of the age—whether some of it does not arise from the flaming and garish colors, from the emphasis, from the Brobdingnagian type of kinds in which our news is displayed."

May it not be that the tremendous mechanical improvements in news production are in themselves responsible for some of this? Some of us, however, in these days of gramophones and megaphones, still reserve our admiration for Beethoven and Mozart.

"Fletcher of Saltoun has once talked about making the ballads of the people. I am sometimes tempted to say I don't mind who writes the leading articles if you will give me full control of the black type and the big headlines."

We are all living in times of enormous difficulty. I do not care what party you belong to but everybody knows that in every Chancellery of Europe there are misgivings as to the future. One cause of this difficulty—I may say the main cause—arises conformity to your own fate?"

 "Oh, my great incomparable Boyle!" cried the listener. "How admirably he carries out his point! How he makes, from an insignificant object like a broomstick, such sublime truths! But by this I know my Boyle, whatever he touches he transforms into gold. Oh, he is a great man!"
 Swift, with the most serious face possible, acknowledged his approval and went home.

On the following evening, Lord and Lady Berkeley had company. As soon as the guests were all assembled, Lady Berkeley related her experience with the wonderful treatise of Boyle's Meditations on a Broomstick. Some of the guests could not suppress skeptical laughter.

"How can you laugh about such a sublime subject," said Lady Berkeley somewhat offended. "I am surprised that you don't know more about your Boyle. His Meditations on a Broomstick are absolutely worthy of such a great moralist as Boyle." She went out and brought the book.

"Are you now convinced, ladies and gentlemen?" she said triumphantly, opening the book at the Meditations on a Broomstick. "I see you are still surprised and can't comprehend it. But I will admit I was at first equally as skeptical. I too had never seen this wonderful chapter, until our dear Swift read it to me."

"What, Swift had discovered it?" cried the guests, laughing heartily. "That explains everything. He has played one of his roguish tricks on you, Lady Berkeley."

"We only need to compare this book with another one of the same kind," said one of the guests, a neighbor. "I will go and bring mine."

Soon he returned with the book, and when it was examined, the Devotional Meditations on a Broomstick could not be found. The company went wild with laughter. Lady Berkeley was the only one that did not join in the laughter. She never forgave Swift the joke he played on her. She did not say this to him, but she never again requested him to read her a chapter from Boyle. And that was just the thing Swift wanted.

Bath Day In Agra Jail.

One of the humorous sights of India, says a contributor to the August Wide World Magazine, is the daily bathing parade in a native prison. In the one we witnessed were youthful habitual criminals, varying in age from 9 to 15 years, taking their daily dip at Agra jail. While the governor watches proceedings from the shade of a tree, the prisoners, each man fettered and carrying a bowl of beaten brass or steel, are led out in double file to a stone pavement, on each side of which runs a shallow trough of water. At the command of a native warder, bowls are filled and waistcloths are washed. At a second order the prisoners scoop water over themselves and then sink smartly to their haunches, one behind another, in parallel lines. Again comes a snappy order from the warder, and each man begins vigorously to rub the back of the fellow in front of him. When the warder judges the "massage" is complete his voice brings the two lines to a smart right-about-face, still on their haunches, and the vigorous rubbing begins again, each man doing for his fellow what his fellow did for him. The process, while comical, is a genuine illustration of the saying, "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours," except, of course, to the prisoners whose fate brings them to the head or tail of the line, where they receive only half the "treatment" of their fellows.

Wandering Youth.

Sudden disappearances of men and women unhappily are a pronounced feature in the life of all great cities, but London has been the first of the world's maelstroms to attempt a tabulation and classification. Last year 2,676 women over 16 years of age were swallowed up in the insatiate vortex of that metropolis without immediate trace. More startling and pregnant with thought to all who are concerned with the problem of safeguarding the young is that, during the same year, 1,118 girls between the ages of 10 and 16 were reported to the metropolitan police as missing. The ultimate tracing of these victims of the dangers of a large city to adolescent womanhood resulted in sad revelations to parents and friends. Some of the missing are still missing and will be. The moral is clear. He who runs may read. Watch, guide and help the youths, girls and boys, who have reached or passed the critical time of maturity. "The thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Orangeville Sun—It's all very well for D. R. Wilkie and other bloated capitalists to advise the people of Canada to "give money now and then build fleet." Seeing that the farmers of this country will have to pay the shot, it would be only fair and square to let them say whether they want their money squandered in that way. The men who pay the piper should certainly have the privilege of calling the tune.

Regina Leader—But the greatest prosperity of the Empire, and of Canada as a part of the Empire, lies in peace and the pursuits of peace. The interests of Canada as a nation and the interests of humanity combine to urge the hope that the Dominion will never know the spirit of militarism and will never again know war, but will rather be able to bend all energies toward the development of the country along lines which will make for the true development of the people.

Toronto Globe—This Province, which voted so emphatically against having "truck or trade" with the Yankees last September, cannot be buying as it votes. Official returns show that Canada in the last fiscal year bought over three hundred and fifty-six million dollars' worth of goods from the United States, and only a hundred and sixteen millions worth from Britain, despite the fact that by Liberal legislation there is a lower rate of duty collected on British goods than on similar goods from the United States. What is Mr. Foster going to do about it? What he ought to do is to admit that the "no truck or trade" cry was a humbug.

Christain Guardian—We should always remember that it is quite possible to improve the conditions and outwards surroundings on life without in any marked way improving life itself. The man who has come up from a three-roomed cottage to live in a hundred thousand dollar mansion may be a better man or a worse man than he was; the house he lives in will never help us decide the question of his morality or of his real worth. Clean streets are good, and we must strive for them with persistent determination, but if in getting them we do not at the same time improve the quality of life that is lived in the midst of them we will not be making any progress worth while.

Pinero's Art.

Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, whose clever comedy "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl" is still drawing large London audiences, is recognized both in this country and on the continent as one of our greatest playwrights. In his early days he was an actor—a fact that explains his wonderful mastery of stage-craft.

Sir Arthur Pinero has made a fortune by his pen, and his plays have been produced in all parts of the globe. Such masterpieces as "Sweet Lavender," "The Gay Lord Quex," "The Second Mrs. Tanageray," and "His House in Order," are familiar to millions of playgoers, and as Sir Arthur Pinero is still in the fifties, other masterpieces may be expected from his pen.

NOVA SCOTIA'S TOWER

WHAT NEWLY-DEDICATED MONUMENT STANDS FOR.

The Memorial Which the Duke of Connaught Inaugurated a Few Days Ago Is of Special Significance to Canadians—It Marks the Place Where the First Parliament Was Formed.

On one of the hills which give diversity and beauty to the site of the City of Halifax, there now stands a lofty and beautiful stone tower, from whose turret-crowded top can be had a charming view of the historical city and its magnificent harbor. A few days ago that tower was dedicated by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught to the memory of the first elective Legislature that ever met on territory now within the boundaries of the Dominion of Canada. The tower, therefore, commemorates the birth of our Parliamentary institutions.

One hundred and fifty-four years have passed since that first Canadian Parliament was called to order in its opening session, but in order to understand the circumstances that attended its creation it is necessary to go a little further back in our history, and start, in fact, with the beginning of British rule in Canada.

British Canadian history, and British Parliamentary institutions in Canada have their beginning in Nova Scotia. That little province has blazed the way along which much of our political life has passed, and in many things set an example for the other British-Canadian communities.

She has also contributed to our public life some of our ablest men, among them being three who have been Prime Ministers of the Dominion. Her contributions to our history, her achievements in solving the problem of colonial self-government, and her contributions to those elements of our population that established, governed and developed this country fully entitle her to the name she bears. She certainly is the New Scotland of British North America, filling in this Dominion a position very similar to that filled by old Scotland in the United Kingdom.

The treaty of Utrecht that brought to a close what is known as Queen Anne's war, gave Acadia to the British crown; and Acadia may be generally described as all that territory now forming the province of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, but for almost seventy years after the cession the whole formed the one province of Nova Scotia.

During the first six years of its history as a British possession, Nova Scotia was under military government, which consisted of the general commanding the troops there, and his officers. It was the rule of the soldier and not the civilian. It was in 1719 that the governor, Col. Phillips, in accordance with instructions received from London, established a form of civil government, which consisted of the governor and an appointed council whose duties were both executive and legislative. This form of government, however, was intended to be only temporary, for an elective House of Assembly was promised, and it was not long before the people began looking for the fulfilment of the promise. They had to wait thirty-nine years—that is until 1758.

At this time Sir Charles Lawrence was governor of Nova Scotia. He had repeatedly been instructed by the Government in England to call a House of Assembly, or elective Parliament, but he had neglected to do so because he knew that as soon as such a representative body came into existence he would have less power than he exercised with only an appointed council to be responsible to and to co-operate with. And Lawrence loved power and clung to it tenaciously. In 1758, however, he received orders from London that he could not ignore. The long-deferred House of Assembly had been created.

Early in the spring the British fleet commanded by Admiral Boscawen arrived in Halifax harbor. With it came a large number of transports having on board a powerful army commanded by Amherst, who two years later brought the war to a close on this continent by the capture of Montreal and the surrender of Canada by Governor Vaudreuil. With Amherst as his chief lieutenant, was a young officer, James Wolfe, who in the following year conducted the siege of Quebec, and "died victorious" on the Plains of Abraham. The fleet sailed away for Louisbourg, and Lawrence was impatient to follow it and take part in the siege. But before he could go he must carry out his orders and set up the long-delayed Parliament.

Governor Lawrence called his council and together they planned that first of Canadian Parliaments, whose House of Assembly was to consist of twenty-two members to be elected by the freeholders. The part of the province not yet divided into counties, and it was the larger part, was to elect sixteen members, the township of Lunenburg, two, and the township of Halifax four. The appointed council was retained as an Upper House, corresponding to the Senate of to-day.

Then followed the elections—the first Parliamentary elections held in this country, and on October 2, 1758, the first session of that first Canadian Parliament was opened at Halifax, Robert Sanderson being chosen Speaker of the Assembly. That first session opened much the same way that sessions of provincial legislatures or of Federal Parliament opens to-day—with a speech from the throne by the governor, read to both Houses.

The session lasted from October 2 until April 17, but the House did not sit continuously for there was a long recess. The sittings were held in the Court House, and the members were called together by the ringing of a bell. The members were not paid salaries or indemnities, as the remuneration of members is now called.

That earliest of Canadian Parliaments held only two sessions, when it was dissolved and a second election held.

DANDY OF THE HOUSE

LEWIS HARCOURT IS BRITAIN'S BEST DRESSED COMMONER.

The Son of the Late Sir William Harcourt Gained His Early Experience as Private Secretary to His Distinguished Father — Can Trace His Ancestry Back to the Conquest and Then Some.

The best-dressed man in the British House of Commons is undoubtedly Mr. "Lulu" Harcourt, the popular representative of Rossendale. The eldest son of Sir William Harcourt, he long served his distinguished father as private secretary, thus gaining a deep insight into political problems.

Such a training was bound to stand Mr. Harcourt in good stead, and he received his opportunity when he was appointed First Commissioner of Works. He distinguished himself by the thoroughness with which he carried out his duties, and no one was surprised when he was promoted to the office of Colonial Secretary.

The Harcourt family is a very distinguished one, and they have little difficulty in tracing their pedigree to a nobleman who flourished in Saxony before the Conquest. It has been asserted with some show of authority that Mr. Lewis Harcourt could have obtained a peerage ere now had he wanted it, but his ambitions do not lie in that direction.

Mrs. Harcourt has a charming personality, and is one of the most distinguished of the Liberal hostesses.

The Harcourts have a stately home at Nuneham Park, Oxford, where they often entertain on an elaborate scale, and even in this respect alone they are a very valuable asset to the political party they espouse.

The rat-catchers of the world made merry recently on the village green of Padworth, near Reading, Eng.

DIVING TO DEATH

Tragedies Due to the Craze For Sensations.

The fatal accident to P. the trick diver, that occurred on Whit-Monday, has trick diving being prohibited resort. It is certainly high time that was done to stop the craze for sensational exhibitions.

The famous diver, P. St. used to dive from a height of a hundred feet into a shallow pool of water, experienced many falls before he met the disaster that invariably overtakes him. On one occasion he was forming in the open, and falling on top of a 90-foot ladder someone below lurched a support, shaking Speedy's perch. The diver fell headlong into the air, but retaining his mind, turned several somersaults before he reached the ground to break the force of his fall heavily, breaking practically every bone in his body, but a month's serious illness notwithstanding the awful blow he had received, continued to perform his hazardous feats. He appeared at the Hippodrome a few days ago, and shortly after leaving the stage met his death.

Another cyclist diver who met a terrible end was Dare-Devil, who appeared at the Olympia eleven years ago. This diver rode on his cycle down a steep slope and somersaulted into the water. His performance was the most dangerous as this performer had no leg.

A sensational turn was put on at the London Hippodrome some time ago by the Sisters Lee. A ladder was attached to the high ceiling of the music-hall, and the two performers were drawn by ropes to the top of the wheel, where they hung from the wheel by straps which they held between their teeth. In this hazardous position they hung for some time while the wheel was rapidly revolved, until swung almost parallel with the ground beneath.

This act was continued for some time in London, and then the performers met with a fatal accident. Whilst being swung at full speed one of the girls lost her hold and flew through the air, falling to the ground with great force. Although not killed, the performer was very badly injured and the act was discontinued.

Bride In Payment

The story of the marriage of Sarah Cadogan to the second Duke of Richmond, which was arranged for the payment of his gambling debts, and its happy ending, is told in Lady Russell's "The Rose Goddess."

"Lord March (as the Duke was called) was eighteen; the bride was twenty. Immediately after the wedding Lord March went with his tutor to the Continent to make the 'grand tour' and Lady Sarah went back to the family home.

Three years elapsed. Lord March returned from his travels with a very interesting recollection of that he was in no hurry to return. On the first evening of his return to London he went to the opera.

There he soon noticed that the seats were turned towards one of the stalls, in which, surrounded by admirers, sat a most beautiful girl. Turning to his neighbor, Lord March asked what

Tornado Ruins Obstruct Roads.

Syracuse, N.Y., Sept. 17.—Scores of farmers, their residences and barns destroyed and crops ruined, the result of Sunday's tornado, early yesterday started their task of reconstruction, aided by hundreds of willing hands.

At night fall they had made but little headway, the ten-mile strip in the township of Salina devastated by the storm presenting a scene of chaos.

Hospital Patient Hangs Himself.

Kingston, Sept. 17.—Hanging to the limb of a tree with a rope around his neck, Michael Rouse, a Bancroft patient at the Rockwood Hospital, was found by one of the attendants in the hospital grounds yesterday morning. He had been missing from the hospital since Sept. 8. The remains were sent to Bancroft.

Blue Blood.

An Irish chauffeur, when near the House of Lords, had the misfortune to run his car over an old man who had a bottle of blue inside his coat. Jumping from his car, and seeing the fluid rapidly staining the old fellow's breast, he cried to his friend: "Finnegan, it'll go harrud wid us! We've killed won o' thim blue-blooded aristocrats that Lloyd George is always talking about!"

Padworth, near Reading, Eng.

For a few moments Londoners had an opportunity of seeing the followers of this ancient art, for they assembled in an office in Southwark street, London, on whose doors printed words proclaimed doom to the rat.

It was a suitable meeting place, for this office was the domain of Mr. Phillips, the rat king, who, possibly, has slain more rats than any man living.

There was Piker, of Birmingham, famous throughout the midlands as a worthy slayer of vermin. There was The Snoozer, of Liverpool, and Slusher, of Buenos Aires, whose kindly face gave no suggestion of a man who delights in slaughter. There were other huntsmen, too, from all corners of the kingdom.

Imagine experts from diverse parts of the world exchanging views on the most up-to-date methods of rat-catching, discussing with glee new devices for luring their victims to their doom, and you have an idea of how unpopular the Padworth picnic must have been with the rat community.

Protecting the Volunteers.

Here is a once-familiar story of the younger Pitt which may bear retelling for the present generation. The solemn and stiff-necked statesman had his moments of ironic humor.

When England was threatened by a French invasion in 1802 there were a great many volunteer soldiers enlisted. But the articles of enlistment guarded these volunteers very carefully against too much fighting.

They were not to take the field "except in case of actual invasion." They were not to be drilled hard "except in case of actual invasion."

When Pitt read these articles he frowned. Finally, on toward the end of the document he came to a provision that in no circumstances were the volunteers to leave the country. Here he lost patience and, seizing a pen, he added to that provision the clause:

"Except in case of actual invasion."

COUNT NOGI'S WILL.

It Shows He Did Not Plan Wife's Suicide.

Tokio, Sept. 17.—The will of Gen. Count Maresuke Nogi, who, with his wife, the Countess Nogi, with the purpose of demonstrating their devotion to their departed sovereign Mutsuhito, committed suicide, was read yesterday.

The Japanese warrior says that he follows the Emperor because his services are no longer required in this world. He had often sought to die, he adds.

The document bears the date of the night of Sept. 12, twenty-four hours previous to the taking of his life, and it indicates that the death of the countess had not then been decided upon. Nogi distributes his property among his wife and friends, and makes donations to a number of public institutions. He says that while his wife lives the house of Nogi may be maintained, but that after her death the line will be extinguished.

The Port Arthur hero suggested that his body be given to a medical college, requesting that only his teeth, hair and nails be buried in the grave.

Admiral Count Heihachiro Togo, a member of the Supreme Military Council, yesterday was appointed chairman of the Imperial Reception Committee formed to receive the foreign envoys to the imperial funeral. He succeeds Gen. Nogi.

MESSANGER IS HONORED

NAPOLEON CASAUT OF OTTAWA GETS I. S. O. MEDAL.

Veteran ex-Chief of the Militia De- partment's Messenger Service Is Decorated by His Majesty After Forty-Four Years of Active Service —Hon. Mr. Pelletier's Mother Was His First School Teacher.

Napoleon Casaut, who has just been honored by King George with the Imperial Service Order Decoration for meritorious service as chief messenger in the Militia Department of Canada for many years, is one of the pioneers of Ottawa and was appointed at Con- federation to the position he held un- til December 30, 1911, when he was placed on the superannuation list.

He was born at St. Thomas in the county of Montgomery, in 1841, and comes of good old French stock. He was educated in his native town and his first teacher was the mother of the present Postmaster-General of Canada, Hon. L. P. Pelletier. At the age of 17 he was appointed to a position in the office of the Receiver-Gen- eral, at Toronto, in the year of 1858, where he remained until August 6, 1867, when he was appointed chief messenger in the Militia Department in Ottawa.

His services have proven eminently satisfactory and he was liked by all the officials and all those having busi- ness with the Militia Department found him a most courteous and oblig- ing as well as capable officer.

Mr. Casaut is hale and hearty, not- withstanding his advanced age. He has had a wide experience, having served under all the Governments since Confederation. He came in per- sonal contact with all the Prime Min- isters, and was well known by most of the prominent politicians having business with the Departments.

He is very well known in fraternal circles, being prominent and active in the Union St. Joseph, the Artisans, and the Catholic Mutual Benefit So- ciety.

LITERARY SHRINES.

Houses In Britain Which Were the Home of Genius.

When Turner purchased a few square feet of canvas worth a shilling or two and, with his pigments and a brush, painted the sunset on it, or the towers, minarets, and palaces of Venice, he made that piece of canvas practically priceless. It is the touch of genius which alone can work this miracle, and, as many a holiday wanderer discovers, it has worked its enchanting spell on bricks and mortar, as well as upon flimsier material.

About two miles from the town of Ayr stands a little unpicturesque clay-built cottage, reared by the horny hands of the father of Robert Burns, and which the poet himself refers to as an "auld clay beggin." There the national bard of Scotland came into a rough and stormy world on January 25th, 1759, and spent the first seven years of his life beneath its thatch. What is that cottage worth? In mud and thatch and mouldering timber practically nothing. Yet, by reason of its being the birthplace of Robert Burns it is priceless to the people of the poet's native land.

Tucked away under the lee of the mountains, which stand like sentinels round the charming lakes of Rydal Water and Grasmere, stands a very unpretentious but very picturesque house which, if it had not once been the abode of genius, might probably be bought "lock, stock and barrel" for a few hundred pounds. Its name is Dove Cottage, and William Words- worth, the great Nature poet, lived there for some years with his sister, and beneath its roof and in its steep little garden, laid out by the poet's own hands, many of his most memor- able poems were written. Doubtless the thousands of American tourists who make pilgrimage to Dove Cottage would dearly like to transport the Marvels of London Life.

The immensity of the world's great- est city is strikingly illustrated by the facts and figures published recently in a report on London life issued by the London County Council. It is estimated, for instance, that $7,000,000 is paid every week in rent, and $2,100,000 in rates, while for the privilege of keeping about 180,000 dogs Londoners pay $300,000 a year. The rich pay over half a million a year in carriage and motor licenses, while altogether no less than $5,000,000,000 worth of property belonging to Londoners is insured.

It is remarkable that while fifty years ago only half the people living in London were born in the capital, to-day we are approaching the time when three-quarters of the population of London are natives, the figures being 668 per 1,000. Most people are under the impression, as they notice the new streets of houses springing up in all directions in the Metropolis, that London is growing bigger every day, but, as a matter of fact, last year $28,000,000 less was spent on house building than in 1902.

There are 750 weddings in London every week, while the weekly average number of inquests is 100. No fewer than 53,000 drunkards are convicted in twelve months, while postmen deliver every day 4,000,000 letters, postcards, circulars and newspapers.

Curious Models.

It is a well-known fact that the faces of many of the carved saints in our churches are so like those of celebrated sinners that the resemblance must be more than accidental. But Birmingham, England, goes one better in two of the gargoyles that adorn the Church of St. George, Wheeler street, Lozells.

When the church was built, many years ago, two of the stonemasons employed on the carving quarrelled, and finally had a stand-up fight, which ended in one of the men having a black eye and the other a broken nose. Like good Englishmen, the men having settled their differences, again became fast friends, and in order to commemorate the event they carved two figures, which still ornament the windows facing Tower street, one with a bandage round its eye and the other with a big plaster across the nose.

The story, we may add, is confirmed by the present rector of St. George's.

Nestor of the Commons.

The home rule debates have brought to the front a remarkable personality in Mr. Samuel Young, the member for East Cavan. Not that the Nestor of Parliament needs any introduction to the House of Commons, but he so seldom obtrudes on public notice that he is apt to be eclipsed by more loquacious members.

Mr. Young was born near Belfast in 1822, and he has enjoyed the unusual distinction of having lived through the reigns of five monarchs. He did not embark on a Parliamentary career until he had attained his three-score years and ten, and he was successful at his first election, defeating the Unionist candidate by no less a majority than 3,000.

Though he has attained the ripe old age of ninety, Mr. Young has the buoyancy of youth. He is neither a teetotaler nor a non-smoker, and he laughs at the maxims which are supposed to conduce to old age.

own hands, many of his most memorable poems were written. Doubtless the thousands of American tourists who make pilgrimage to Dove Cottage would dearly like to transport the sacred stones to the States. But the price is too heavy even for Rockefeller.

There is a quiet and eminently respectable street in Chelsea. Opposite the end of it, in the Embankment Gardens, sits the rugged stone effigy, carved by a master sculptor, of a man who used to live at the house numbered twenty-four. The price of all the other houses in Cheyne Row could not suffice to buy Thomas Carlyle's house, because, there he lived many years, and there he wrote his "French Revolution" and his "Frederick the Great" and his "Cromwell." The visitors' book which lies upon the table of the old Sage's dining-room contains the names of prince and peasant from every country on the globe.

At the corner of an old-fashioned Georgian square in the sleepy cathedral city of Lichfield stands another priceless house. It is priceless just as the portrait of the man who was born there, painted by his friend Sir Joshua Reynolds, one of the chief treasures of our National Gallery, is priceless. People from the ends of the earth go to Lichfield primarily to see the house in which Dr. Samuel Johnson was born, and then, as an afterthought, they go round the corner and visit the cathedral.

A Thrifty Englishman.

What self-help and thrift can do for a man is strikingly demonstrated by the case of John Morrison, a Yorkshire, England, carpenter, who, although his wages had never exceeded $8.75 a week, has been able to leave behind him the substantial sum of $15,000, every penny of it the fruits of saving.

When he married a little over forty years ago, he looked around to see what economies he could effect. He found that he had been spending at least $1.25 a week on beer and tobacco; these he could very well dispense with. That meant a saving of $65 a year. And this was the nucleus of his fortune.

A few weeks later his wages were raised from $7.50 to $8.75 weekly. He could rub along without the extra $1.25, and was thus able to put by $130 a year. When his savings had amounted to $500 he bought two cottages, borrowing three-fourths of the purchase money and paying off the loan out of the rents. He was a man of property now.

The appetite for thrift took full possession of him. He was fond of gardening, and he decided to turn his hobby and his spare time into money. He rented half an acre of land; his wife opened a shop for the sale of the produce, and the first year he was able to increase his savings to $5 a week, with which, in two years' time, he was able to buy two more houses.

And thus simply his fortune grew. House was added to house, each paying for its own purchase with its rent, until at 60 he was able to retire on $750 a year, almost twice his highest wages as a workman, and when he died to leave a good $15,000 behind him.

Chinese Premier to Retire.

Peking, Sept. 17.—It is announced that Lu Cheng Ssiang, Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs will retire from office on account of ill-health. Chao Ping Chun will remain as acting Premier. Liang Men Ting will assume the portfolio of foreign affairs, and Liung Cheng Feng will be appointed minister to Russia.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 14 were 1600 cattle, 2650 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 600 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale consisted of 1100 cattle, 2700 sheep and lambs, 1150 hogs and 350 calves.

There was very little change in the condition of the market for cattle as compared with a week ago. The supply of common and medium stock was larger, but there continues to be a scarcity of good to choice steers, for which there is considerable enquiry. There was an increased demand for lower grades, owing to the scarcity of better lots. The demand was rather slow early in the day, as buyers expected that drovers would have to accept lower figures, but the latter were firm in their view, and when butchers and packers were convinced that no important change was going to be made, the trade steadily improved, and by noon few were left unsold. A few full loads of good eastern steers sold at $6.25 to $6.50, and odd lots of choice cows brought as high as $6.50 to $6.75 per 100 pounds. There have been no northwestern ranch cattle on the market for the past two weeks, owing to the fact that present prices ruling here will not permit of them being shipped to sell at a profit.

Owing to the continued heavy demand for lambs in this market from all sources of late, a stronger feeling has developed in the market, and prices have advanced 25c to 50c per 100 pounds. The supply was fairly large today, for which the demand was active from butchers and packers, and sales of Quebec stock were made at $5.50 to $5.75, and Ontario at $6.25 to $6.50 per 100 pounds. There was no change in sheep, for which the demand is only fair, and supplies ample to fill the requirements. There were some choice milk-fed calves on the market, for which the demand was good, and sales of such were made as high as $15 each.

The tone of the market for hogs was stronger, and prices, as compared with a week ago, show an advance of 5c to 40c per 100 pounds, which is attributed to the fact that supplies coming forward are not sufficient to fill the requirements of the trade, and in consequence some of the packers have had to turn their attention to the western market, consequently unless receipts increase in the near future values will likely go higher. Demand was good. Selected lots sold at $8.65 to $8.90. Per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7; do., medium, $5.50 to $6.25; do., common, $4 to $4.50; canners, $2.75 to $3; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.50 to $5.75; do., medium, $4.50 to $5.25; do., bulls, $3.50 to $5; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $70; do., common and medium, each, $40 to $50; springers, $30 to $35.

Sheep, ewes, $4 to $4.25; bucks and culls, $3.50 to $3.75. Lambs, $5.50 to $6.50. Hogs, f.o.b., $8.65 to $8.90. Calves, $5 to $15.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Cattle—Receipts, 22,000; market steady; beefs, $6.75 to $10.85; Texas steers, $4.75 to $6.40; western steers, $5.75 to $9.15; stockers and feeders, $4.25 to $7.15; cows and heifers, $2.90 to $3.25; calves, $3 to $11.

Hogs—Receipts, 30,000; market weak, 10c lower; light, $8.25 to $8.85; mixed, $8.05 to $8.85; heavy, $7.85 to $8.70; rough, $7.05 to $8.05; pigs, $5.75 to $8.15; bulk of sales, $3.25 to $3.70.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 42,000; market steady; 10c lower; native, $3.50 to $4.65; western, $3.60 to $4.65; yearlings, $4.70 to $5.85. Lambs, native, $4.35 to $7.65; western, $5 to $7.70.

Save Your Kashmir Shawl.

Save your Kashmir shawl. It may soon become as valuable as a fine old Turkish rug. The use of imported European wool in India threatens the extinction of what remains of the shawl industry in that country, and it is impossible for it to regain its lost position. In fact, it is only a matter of time when a fine Kashmir shawl will be a curiosity; also the Indians, with the advance of European civilization, seem, to be losing the art of shawl making, just as Canadian Indians are forgetting how to weave baskets. Dealing with the present day Kashmirs, one notices how, with the arts and the trade which Kashmir had in olden days, the businesslike and commercial qualities of the people have also deteriorated. Kashmir state once had a shawl trade of $1,000,000 a year.

ONE TRUE GOSPEL MANY PERVERSIONS

Gospel of Social Uplift Among the Perversions.

Postor Russell Also Points Out That the Gospel of Faith Healing Is Another of the Many Substitutes For the Greatest of All Gospels.

PASTOR RUSSELL

you and that would pervert the Gospel of Christ; * * * let him be accursed."
Gal. 1: 6-8.

"When we remember that there is but one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, presented in the Bible we are astounded to find so many faiths, so many "Gospels," presented by so many denominations, all bearing the name of Christ and all giving evidence of some relationship to the Truth.

Although the Apostle was one of the pioneers of the Church, even in his day the brethren in Galatia had "so soon" turned away to a perverted Message. No wonder, then, that the true Gospel had during the fifteen centuries following become almost buried under human tradition.

It will not do to say that we have many denominations, but only one Gospel. Denominations were not organized for amusement, but because the founders of each believed that they saw sufficient reason to justify them forming a new sect.

The perverted Gospel which the Galatians were disposed to accept is very prevalent to-day, and is as much to be reprehended. The so-called Gospel about which St. Paul took them to task consisted of an admixture of the restraints of the Jewish Law and the Grace of God in Christ.

This perverted Gospel was, that in addition to believing on Christ it was necessary to become Jews.

Many Christians are still making the same mistake; they do not appreciate the Master's statement, "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

Pastor Russell, the ablest of the world's Bible exegetes, attributes the measure of bondage to forms and ceremonies still prevalent, to the immaturity of development of many Christians. These are only "babes in Christ." (1. Cor. 3: 1.) Growth in grace and knowledge is needed, to bring such to the full stature of manhood in Christ and to an appreciation of their relationship to God as sons.
He also charged that from the most prominent pulpits of Christendom the Gospel of Christ respecting the forgiveness of individual sin, the reconciliation of the individual heart, the individual begetting of the Holy Spirit
and the personal walk in newness of
life has been discarded.

Many of the preachers, having had

A Chip of the Old Block.

Lord Marcus Beresford has got his fair share of the family attributes. He has a genial wit, which stands him in good stead as manager of the San-dringham stud. Previous to taking up this appointment, he was for five years starter to the Jockey Club, so that he knows more than a little concerning turf matters.

One of his wittiest rejoinders was made at a dinner party to which an eminent personage had been invited.
It happened that an officer present had rather too much to drink, and the distinguished guest, very annoyed, asked who the offender might be. The name was supplied, with the additional information that he "had seen service." "What sort of service?"
inquired the guest. "Dinner service, sir," replied Lord Marcus Beresford.

Many a man who thinks a lot of a girl marries her and then forgets all about her.

The only way to keep from telling your troubles is not to have any.

Rough on the Bishop.
 Bishop Blomfield discovered one day as he entered the pulpit that he had forgotten the manuscript of his sermon. It was impossible to do as the Scottish minister did in similar circumstances, send for the sermon from his home while the congregation sang Psalm 119. No, he must preach extempore, and did so, taking for his theme the existence of God. Very well satisfied he felt with his effort. As he walked home he overtook one of his congregation, whose opinion of the sermon he invited. "Well, it was a very good sermon," was the reply, "but I don't agree with it. I believe there is a God."
Simplified Spelling in Australia.
 Simplified spelling is progressing in Australia. The education department of Victoria has issued a circular to its teachers embodying a list of words that must be taught in future on "nu-spin" principles. The "u" is to be dropped out of all such words as "honour" and "favour." Plough is to become "plow" and centre is to be changed into "center."

ciliation of the individual heart, the individual begetting of the Holy Spirit
 and the personal walk in newness of
 life has been discarded.
 Many of the preachers, having had no such experiences themselves, were loath to talk about them. But salaries must go on, and something must be said. The message of the hour, therefore, is athletics, manliness, position in society, attention to political duties, attainment of high positions in the world and money withal!
 Far be it from me to teach inatten-tion to the duties and responsibilities of life. The Gospel of Jesus, however, distinctly impresses upon all his followers that their consecration to walk in His steps means their separation from worldly ambitions and from giving of chief concern to the preservation of their earthly lives. It exhorts that these are to be considered secondary to the new ideals set before them in the Gospel of Christ.
 At this point Pastor Russell struck to the root of his subject. He pointed out the almost complete failure to recognize the great "Divine Plan of the Ages," "hidden for 4,000 years—and in the days of the Apostle made known. He recognizes that God is now conducting an election according to fitness, and that after this He will use the Elect in the work of blessing
 the non-elect.
 The followers of Jesus are not at liberty to adopt theories, either their own or those of other men in respect to the way in which this great work of uplifting the world is to be accomplished. They are co-laborers with God—and not with men. (II. Cor. 6:1.)
 Pastor Russell then proceeded to outline the Divine Plan as recorded in the Scriptures. He showed that God's purpose is, first, to select the Church, and then to uplift not only for those of the non-elect who shall remain, but all those of the non-elect in the great prison-house of death, awaiting the summons to "Come forth ••• to a resurrection by judgment," for "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust." (Acts, 24:15; John 5:28, 29, R.V.)
 The resurrection by judgment will prove to be successful beyond the fondest hope. In proof of this we have,
 for instance, the Scripture, "When the judgments of the Lord shall be in the earth the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness."
 The greatest perversion of the Gospel of Christ is the Gospel of Purgatory and eternal torture. And the Gospel of Faith Healing is opposed both to the letter and spirit of Jesus' teachings. Not one of the Lord's disciples, nor a prophet, was healed miraculously.
 The miracles which Jesus performed were upon outsiders, and were but illustration of how He and His Elect in Kingdom glory will, in the coming Age, uplift and restore all the willing and obedient.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"To Athos' residence now, and I beg you to make haste."

"Will Bazin go with us?" asked Aramis.

"Perhaps so. At all events it is best that he should follow us to Athos'."

Aramis called Bazin and after having ordered him to join them at Athos' residence: "Let us go, then," said he, taking his cloak, sword and three pistols.

As they went out Aramis placed his hand upon the arm of D'Artagnan and looked at him earnestly.

"You have not spoken of this lady?" said he.

"To nobody in the world."

"That's well!"

They found Athos holding his leave of absence in one hand and M. de Treville's note in the other.

"Can you explain to me what this leave of absence and this letter which I have just received mean?" said the astonished Athos:

My Dear Athos—I wish, as your health absolutely requires it, that you should rest for a fortnight. Go, then, and take the waters of Forges or any that may be more agreeable to you and re-establish yourself as quickly as possible. Your affectionate DE TREVILLE.

"Well, this leave of absence and that letter mean that you must follow me, Athos."

"To the waters of the Forges?"

"There or elsewhere."

"In the king's service?"

"Either the king's or the queen's," said he.

At that moment Porthos entered.

"Here is a strange thing that has happened!" said he. "Since when, I wonder, in the musketeers, did they three copies of that letter, because it is sealed. We must then, it appears to me, travel in company. This letter is here in this pocket." And he pointed to the pocket which contained the letter. "If I should be killed one of you must take it and pursue the route. If he be killed, it will be another's turn, and so on. Provided a single one arrives, that is all that is required."

"Bravo, D'Artagnan!" cried Athos. "We will arm our four lackeys with pistols and musketoons. If they send an army out against us we will give battle, and the survivor, as D'Artagnan says, will carry the letter."

"Well said," cried Aramis. "I agree to Athos' plan. And you, Porthos?"

"I agree to it, too," said Porthos, "if D'Artagnan approves of it. D'Artagnan, being bearer of the letter, is naturally the head of the enterprise. Let him decide, and we will execute."

"Well," said D'Artagnan, "I decide that we should adopt Athos' plan, and that we set off in half an hour."

"Agreed!" shouted the three musketeers in chorus.

And every one, stretching out his hand to the bag, took his 75 pistols.

CHAPTER XV.

The Journey.

AT 2 o'clock in the morning our four adventurers left Paris by the barrier St. Denis. The lackeys followed, armed to the teeth. All went well till they arrived at Chantilly, which place they reached about 8 o'clock in the morning. They stood in need of breakfast lifted him off at the door of a cabaret, left Bazin with him and set forward again in the hope of sleeping at Amiens.

"Well," said Athos as soon as they were again in motion, "reduced to two masters and Grimaud and Planchet!"

The travelers arrived at Amiens at midnight and alighted at the inn of the Golden Lily.

The host had the appearance of as honest a man as any on earth. He wished to lodge the two travelers each in a charming chamber, but unfortunately these charming chambers were at the opposite extremities of the hotel, and D'Artagnan and Athos declined them. They declared they would sleep in the common chamber, each upon a mattress, which might be thrown upon the ground.

They had just prepared their beds and barricaded their door within when some one knocked at the yard shutter. In fact, it was Planchet and Grimaud.

"Grimaud can take care of the horses," said Planchet. "If you are willing, gentlemen, I will sleep across your doorway upon a bundle of straw, and you will then be certain that nobody can come to you."

Planchet installed himself across the doorway, while Grimaud went and shut himself up in the stable, undertaking that by 5 o'clock in the morning he and the four horses should be ready.

At 4 o'clock in the morning there was a terrible riot in the stables. Grimaud had tried to waken the stable boys, and the stable boys had set upon him and beaten him. When they opened the window they saw the poor highroad and ran toward Planchet called his master to a gentleman who had with his lackey and preceded about fifty paces.

They made all speed to this gentleman, who appeared with great haste. His boots were with dust, and he inquired not instantly cross over to

"Nothing would be more the captain of a vessel I sail, "but this morning a rived that no one should be cross without express permission the cardinal."

"I have that permission gentleman, drawing a paper pocket: "here it is."

"Have it examined by the of the port," said the cardinal, "give me the preference."

"Where shall I find the gentleman?" "At his country house. may see it from here—at that little hill, that slanted."

"Very well," said the gentleman. D'Artagnan and Planchet the gentleman at a distance noticed, but when he was city D'Artagnan quickly caught him just as he was entering the wood.

"Monsieur," said D'Artagnan, "appear to be in great haste."

"No one can be more so."

"I am sorry for that," said D'Artagnan, "for, as I am in great haste, I wished to beg you to a service."

"What service?"

"I want that order of the king, the bearer, seeing that I have of my own and must have

"Let me pass!"

"You shall not pass."

"My brave young man, out your brains. Hola, Lu tols!"

"Planchet," called out D'Artagnan, "take care of the lackey—save the master."

Planchet, emboldened by his position, sprang upon Lubin, strong and vigorous, he sprang on the broad of his back his knee upon his breast.

Seeing this, the gentleman sword and sprang upon Planchet, but he had more than he could deal with.

In three seconds D'Artagnan wounded him three times, at each thrust:

"One for Athos, one for Aramis!"

At the third hit the gentleman heavily to the ground.

D'Artagnan believed him or at least insensible and told him for the purpose of valiantly, but at the moment he put his hand to search for the sword, who had not a sword, plunged the point of his sword into his breast, crying:

"And one for you!"

"And one for me! The last!" cried D'Artagnan in taking him to the earth with his thrust through his body.

This time the gentleman's eyes and fainted. D'Artagnan's pockets and took from the order for the passage. the name of the Count de V.

"Now," said Planchet,

"Here is a strange thing that has happened!" said he. "Since when, I wonder, in the musketeers, did they grant men leave of absence without its being asked for?"

"Since," said D'Artagnan, "they have friends who ask it for them."

"Yes, we are going"—said Aramis.

"To London, gentlemen," said D'Artagnan.

"To London!" cried Porthos. "And what are we going to do in London?"

"That is what I am not at liberty to tell you, gentlemen. You must trust to me."

"But in order to go to London a man should have some money, and I have none."

"Nor I," said Aramis and Porthos.

"Well, I have," added D'Artagnan, pulling out his treasure from his pocket and placing it on the table. "There are in this bag 300 pistoles. Let each take 75, which will be quite enough to take us to London and back. Besides, we may be sure that all of us will not arrive at London."

"What is this, then, a campaign upon which we are entering?"

"And a most dangerous one. I give you fair notice."

"Ah, ha! But if we do risk being killed," said Porthos, "at least I should like to know what for."

"Is the king accustomed to give reasons? You need give yourselves no uneasiness about that."

"D'Artagnan is right," said Athos. "D'Artagnan, I am ready to follow you. And now, when are we to go?"

"Immediately," replied D'Artagnan.

"Holla! Grimaud, Planchet, Mousqueton, Bazin!" cried the four young men, calling their lackeys. "Clean my boots and fetch the horses."

Planchet, Grimaud, Mousqueton and Bazin set off at full speed.

"First we go to Calais," said D'Artagnan. "That is the most direct line to London."

"I am the bearer of a letter, that is all. I have not and I cannot make the teeth. All went well till they arrived at Chantilly, which place they reached about 8 o'clock in the morning. They stood in need of breakfast and alighted at the door of an inn. They ordered the lackeys not to unsaddle the horses and to hold themselves in readiness to set off again immediately.

They entered the common room and placed themselves at table. A gentleman, who had just arrived by the route of Dammartin, was seated at the same table and was taking his breakfast. He opened the conversation by talking of rain and fine weather. The travelers replied. He drank to their good health, and the travelers returned his politeness.

But at the moment Mousqueton came to announce that the horses were ready, and they were rising from table, the stranger proposed to Porthos to drink the health of the cardinal. Porthos replied that he asked no better if the stranger in his turn would drink the health of the king. The stranger cried that he acknowledged no other king but his eminence. Porthos told him he was drunk, and the stranger drew his sword.

"You have committed a piece of folly," said Athos, "but it can't be helped. There is no drawing back. Kill the fellow and rejoin us as soon as you can."

And all three mounted their horses and set out at a good pace, while Porthos was promising his adversary to perforate him with all the thrusts known in the fencing schools.

And the travelers continued their route.

At Beauvais they stopped two hours, as well to breathe their horses a little as to wait for Porthos. At the end of the two hours, as Porthos did not come and as they heard no news of him, they resumed their journey.

At a league from Beauvais, where the road was confined between two high banks, they fell in with eight or ten men who were digging holes.

Aramis, not liking to soil his boots, apostrophized them sharply. The laborers began to jeer the travelers, and by their insolence disturbed the equanimity even of the cool Athos, who urged on his horse against one of them.

The men all immediately drew back to the ditch, from which each took a concealed musket. The result was that our seven travelers were outnumbered in weapons. Aramis received a ball, which passed through his shoulder, and Mousqueton another ball, which lodged in the fleshy part of the leg. Mousqueton alone fell from his horse, not because he was severely wounded, but because he judged the wound to be more serious than it really was.

"It is an ambushade!" shouted D'Artagnan. "Don't waste a charge! Forward!"

Aramis, wounded as he was, seized the mane of his horse, which carried him on with the others. Mousqueton's horse rejoined them, and galloped by the side of his companions.

They continued at their best speed for two hours, but at Crevecoeur Aramis declared he could proceed no farther. In fact, it required all the courage which he concealed beneath his elegant form and polished manners to bear him so far. He every minute grew more pale, and they were obliged to support him on his horse. They ble boys, and the stable boys had set upon him and beaten him. When they opened the window they saw the poor lad lying senseless.

Planchet went down into the yard and proceeded to saddle the horses. But the horses were all knocked up. Mousqueton's horse, which had traveled for five or six hours without a rider the day before, alone might have been able to pursue the journey. But by an inconceivable error a veterinary surgeon, who had been sent for, as it appeared, to bleed one of the host's horses, had bled Mousqueton's.

This began to be annoying. Athos and D'Artagnan went out, while Planchet was sent to inquire if there were not three horses to be sold in the neighborhood. At the door stood two horses, fresh, strong and fully equipped. These would just have suited them. He asked where the masters of them were and was informed that they had passed the night in the auberge and were then settling with the master.

Athos went down to pay the reckoning, while D'Artagnan and Planchet stood at the street door. The host was in a lower and back chamber, to which Athos was requested to go.

Athos entered without the least distrust and took out two pistoles to pay the bill. The host took the money which Athos offered to him and, after turning it over and over in his hands, suddenly cried out that it was bad and that he would have him and his companions arrested as coiners.

"You scoundrel," cried Athos, stepping toward him, "I'll cut your ears off!"

But the host stooped, took two pistols from a drawer, pointed them at Athos and called out for help.

At the same instant four men armed to the teeth entered by lateral doors and rushed upon Athos.

"I am taken!" shouted Athos with all the power of his lungs. "Go on, D'Artagnan! Spur, spur!" and he fired two pistols.

D'Artagnan and Planchet did not require twice bidding. They unfastened the two horses that were waiting at the door, leaped upon them, buried their spurs in their sides and set off at full gallop.

"Do you know what has become of Athos?" asked D'Artagnan of Planchet as they galloped on.

"Ah, monsieur," said Planchet, "I saw one fall at each of his shots, and he appeared to me through the glass door to be fighting with his sword with the others."

"Brave Athos!" murmured D'Artagnan. "Forward, Planchet, forward! You are a brave fellow!"

Both, with free use of the spur, arrived at St. Omer without drawing bit. At St. Omer they breathed their horses with their bridles passed under their arms, for fear of accident, and ate a morsel in their hands, standing in the road, after which they departed again.

At a hundred paces from the gates of Calais D'Artagnan's horse sank under him and could not by any means be got up again, the blood flowing from both his eyes and his nose. There still remained Planchet's horse, but after he stopped he remained quite still and could not be urged to move a step.

Fortunately, as we have said, they were within a hundred paces of the city; they left their two bags upon the

"But you appear to me to be ed," said Planchet.

"Oh, that's nothing! Let that which is most pressing we will attend to my ward, besides, I don't think a very dangerous one."

And they both set forward; they could toward the corner of the worthy functionary.

The Count de Wardes was informed, and D'Artagnan was informed.

"You have an order signed cardinal?"

"Yes, monsieur," replied D'Artagnan, "here it is."

"It appears that his eminence is anxious to prevent some crossing to England?"

"Yes, a certain D'Artagnan, a gentleman, who left the company of three of his friends, with the intention of going to London."

"Do you know him personally the governor."

"Oh, yes, perfectly well."

"Describe him to me, the governor."

"Nothing more easy."

And D'Artagnan gave, minute and in every way accurate description of the Wardes.

"We will keep a sharp eye on him, and if we lay hands on him, his eminence may be assured he will be reconducted to Paris under escort."

The governor signed the order and delivered it to D'Artagnan, who lost no time in uselessly consulting the governor, but thanked the governor, and departed.

When once out he and D'Artagnan off as fast as they could, avoiding a detour avoided the way entered the city by another street minutes after they were there. And it was time, for they had sailed half a league when they saw a flash and heard a report. It was the cannon which was firing the closing of the port.

He had now leisure to look at the vessel. Fortunately, as he thought, it was not dangerous point of the sword had met him and glanced along the horizon. D'Artagnan was worn out with the mattress was laid upon the ground. He threw himself down and fell fast asleep.

At 10 o'clock the vessel arrived in the port of Dover, and in a few hours D'Artagnan and Planchet were in the capital.

DANGER PERIOD OF WOMAN'S LIFE FROM 45 to 50

Interesting Experience of Two Women—Their Statements Worth Reading.

White Oak, Ont.—"At Change of Life when doctors could do no more and I was given up by my friends, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to the front and did wonders for me. I had been having female troubles for years, my head troubled me severely at times, I had bearing down pains and back-ache and I was very anæmic from excessive flowing. I recommend your Compound highly and do all I can to advertise it as a genuine woman's medicine."—Mrs. SYLVESTER MANNING, White Oak, Ontario.

The Case of Mrs. Kirilin.

Circleville, Ohio.—"I can truthfully say that I never had anything do me so much good during Change of Life as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Before I had taken one half a bottle of it I began to feel better, and I have continued taking it. My health is better than it has been for several years. If all women would take it they would escape untold pain and misery at this time of life."—Mrs. ALICE KIRILIN, 358 W. Mill St., Circleville, Ohio.

The Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. At such times women may rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Buckingham on a piece of paper, and every one to whom he showed it pointed out to him the way to the duke's mansion.

The duke was at Windsor hunting with the king.

D'Artagnan inquired for the confidential valet of the duke, who, having accompanied him in all his voyages, spoke French perfectly well. He told him that he came from Paris on an affair of life and death and that he must speak with his master instantly.

The confidence with which D'Artagnan spoke convinced Patrick, which was the name of this minister. He ordered two horses to be saddled and himself went as guide to the young guardsman. As for Planchet, he had been lifted from his horse as stiff as a rush. The poor lad's strength was almost exhausted. D'Artagnan seemed to be made of iron. On their arrival at the castle they inquired for the duke.

"Whom must I announce to my lord duke?" asked Patrick.

"The young man who one evening sought a quarrel with him on the Pont Neuf, opposite the Samaritaine."

Patrick galloped off, reached the duke and announced to him in the terms di-

The Duke Approached the Altar and Fell on His Knees.

"All is lost! All is lost! Two of the studs are wanting! There are but ten of them!"

"Can you have lost them, milord?"

"They have been stolen," replied the duke, "and it is the cardinal who has dealt me this blow. See! The ribbons which held them have been cut with scissors."

"If milord suspects they have been stolen perhaps the person who stole them still has them."

"Let me reflect," said the duke. "The only time I wore these studs was at a ball given by the king a week ago at Windsor. The Countess de Winter, with whom I had had a quarrel, became reconciled to me at that ball. That reconciliation was nothing but the vengeance of a jealous woman. I have never seen her from that day. The woman is an agent of the cardinal's. When is this ball to take place?"

"On Monday next."

"On Monday next! Still five days before us. That's more time than we want. Patrick!" cried the duke, opening the door of the chapel, "Patrick!"

His confidential valet, who had that moment returned, appeared at his call. "My jeweler and my secretary!"

Although the jeweler had been mentioned first, it was the secretary that first made his appearance, simply because he lived in the mansion. He found Buckingham seated at a table in his bedchamber writing orders with his own hand.

"Master Jackson," said he, "go instantly to the lord chancellor and tell him that I desire him to execute these orders. I wish them to be promulgated immediately."

"But, my lord, if the lord chancellor interrogates me upon the motives which may have led your grace to adopt such an extraordinary measure, what reply shall I make?"

"That such is my pleasure."

"Will that be the answer?" replied

finished. They were imitated perfectly to look like the others.

Buckingham immediately called D'Artagnan.

"Here," said he to him, "are the diamond studs that you came to fetch and be my witness that I have done all that human power could do."

"Be satisfied, milord; I will tell all that I have seen. But does your grace mean to give me the studs without the casket?"

"The casket would only incumber you. Besides, the casket is the more precious from being all that is left to me. You will say that I keep it. And now, how shall I ever acquit myself of the debt I owe you?"

D'Artagnan colored up to the eyes. "Let us understand each other, milord," replied he. "What I have done has been for the queen and not at all for your grace. And, still further, for one who is my lady, as the queen is yours."

"I understand," said the duke, smiling, "and I even believe that I know that other person. It is"— "Milord, I have not named her!"

"That is true," said the duke, "and it is to this person I am bound to discharge my debt of gratitude."

"You have said, milord; for truly, at this moment when there is question of war I confess to you that I see nothing in your grace but an enemy, whom I should have great pleasure in meeting on the field of battle, all which, however, will not prevent me from executing to the very point my commission or from laying down my life."

D'Artagnan bowed to the duke and was retiring.

"Well, you are going away in that manner! But where and how?"

"I had forgotten that England was an island, and that you were the king of it."

"Go to the port, ask for the brig Sund and give this letter to the captain. He will convey you to a little port, where certainly you are not expected, and which is ordinarily only frequented by fishermen."

"What is the name of that port?"

"St. Valery. But listen: When you have arrived there, you will go to a mean inn, without a name and without a sign, a mere fisherman's hut. You cannot be mistaken; there is but one."

"And then?"

"You will ask for the host and will repeat to him the word 'Forward!' That is the password. He will give you a ready saddled horse and will point out to you the road you are to take. You will find in this manner four relays on your route. If you will give at each of these relays your address in Paris the four horses will follow you thither. You already know two of them. They were those we rode on, and the others are not inferior to them. These horses are equipped for the field. However proud you may be, you will not refuse to accept one of them and to request your three companions to accept the others. That is in order to make war against us besides."

D'Artagnan made his way as quickly as possible to the port. Fifty vessels were waiting to set out in momentary expectation of the removal of the prohibition. When passing alongside of one of them D'Artagnan fancied he perceived on board of it the sought a quarrel with him on the Pont Neuf, opposite the Samaritaine."

Patrick galloped off, reached the duke and announced to him in the terms di- rected that a messenger awaited him.

Buckingham at once remembered the circumstances and, suspecting that something was going on in France, rode straight up to D'Artagnan, Patrick keeping in the background.

"No misfortune has happened to the queen?" cried the duke.

"Take this letter," said D'Artagnan.

"From her majesty!" said Bucking- ham.

"What is this rent?" showing D'Ar- tagnan a place where it had been pierced through.

"Ah, ah!" said D'Artagnan. "I did not see that; it was the sword of the Count de Wardes that made that hole when he ran it into my breast. It is only a scratch."

"Just heavens—what have I read!" cried the duke. "Patrick, remain here, or, rather, join the king, wherever he may be, and tell his majesty that I hereby beg him to excuse me, but an affair of the greatest importance calls me to London. Come, monsieur, come!" And both set off toward the capital at full gallop.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Countess de Winter.

AS they rode along the duke en- deavored to draw from D'Ar- tagnan, not what had passed, but what D'Artagnan himself knew.

The horses went like the wind, and in an incredibly short time they were in London. On entering the court of his house, Buckingham sprang from his horse, and, without taking heed of the noble animal, threw the bridle on his neck and sprang toward the vesti- bule. The duke walked so fast that D'Artagnan had some trouble in keeping up with him. He arrived in a bed- chamber which was at once a miracle of taste and of splendor. In the al- cove was a door in the tapestry, which the duke opened with a small gold key.

D'Artagnan found himself with the duke in a small chapel covered with a tapestry of Persian silk worked with gold and brilliantly lit with a vast number of wax lights. Over a species of altar and beneath a canopy of blue velvet, surmounted by white and red plumes, was a full length portrait of Anne of Austria, perfect in resem- blance.

Upon the altar and beneath the por- trait was the casket containing the diamond studs.

The duke approached the altar, fell on his knees as a priest might have done before a crucifix, and opened the casket.

"There," said he, drawing from the casket a large bow of blue ribbon all sparkling with diamonds. "Here," said he, "are the precious studs which I have taken an oath should be buried with me. The queen gave them to me, the queen requires them back again."

Then he began to kiss, one after the other, those dear studs with which he was about to part. All at once he uttered a terrible cry.

which may have led your grace to adopt such an extraordinary measure, what reply shall I make?"

"That such is my pleasure."

"Will that be the answer," replied the secretary, smiling, "which he must transmit to his majesty if by chance his majesty should have the curiosity to know why no vessel is to leave any of the ports of Great Britain?"

"You are right, Master Jackson," re- plied Buckingham. "He will say, in that case, to the king that I am deter- mined on war and that this measure is my first act of hostility against France."

The secretary bowed and retired.

"We are safe on that side," said Buckingham, turning toward D'Ar- tagnan. "If the studs are not yet gone to Paris they will not arrive till after you. I have just placed an embargo on all vessels at present in his majesty's ports, and without particular permis- sion not one can lift an anchor."

D'Artagnan looked at him with stu- pefaction.

"Yes," said he, "yes, Anne of Austria is my true queen. Upon a word from her I would betray my country, I would betray my king."

The goldsmith entered. He was an Irishman, one of the most skillful of his craft.

"Master O'Reilly," said the duke to him, leading him into the chapel. "look at these diamond studs and tell me what they are worth apiece."

"Fifteen hundred pistoles each, my lord."

"How many days would it require to make two studs exactly like them? You see, there are two wanting."

"A week, my lord."

"I will give you 3,000 pistoles each for two if I can have them by the day after tomorrow."

"My lord, you shall have them."

"You are a jewel of a man, Master O'Reilly, but that is not all—these studs cannot be trusted to anybody—it must be effected in the palace."

"Impossible, my lord. There is no one but myself can execute them so that the new may not be distinguished from the old."

"Therefore, my dear Master O'Reilly, you are my prisoner. Name to me such of your workmen as you stand in need of and point out the tools they must bring."

The goldsmith wrote to his wife, charging her to send his most skillful apprentice, an assortment of diamonds, of which he gave the names and the weight, and the necessary tools.

Buckingham led the goldsmith to the chamber destined for him and which, at the end of half an hour, was trans- formed into a workshop. Then he placed a sentinel at each door, with an order to admit nobody upon any pretense but his valet de chambre, Pat- rick.

Buckingham assigned D'Artagnan a chamber adjoining his own. He wish- ed to have the young man at hand, not that he at all mistrusted him, but for the sake of having some one to whom he could constantly talk about the queen.

In one hour after the ordinance was published in London that no vessel bound for France should leave the ports—not even the packet boat with letters. In the eyes of everybody this was a declaration of war between the two kingdoms.

On the day after the morrow, by 11 o'clock, the two diamond studs were mentary expectation of the removal of the prohibition. When passing along- side of one of them D'Artagnan fancied he perceived on board of it the lady of Meung, the same whom the unknown gentleman had styled milady and who D'Artagnan had thought was so handsome; but, thanks to the tide of the river and a fair wind, his ves- sel passed so quickly that he had lit- tle more than a glimpse of her.

The next day, about 9 o'clock in the morning, he landed at St. Valery. D'Artagnan went instantly to the inn and pronounced to the host the word "Forward!" The host instantly led him to the stable, where a ready sad- dled horse awaited him.

"I want to know the route I am to follow," said D'Artagnan.

"Go from hence to Blangy and from Blangy to Neufchatel. At Neufchatel go to the hotel of the Herse d'Or, give the password to the host, and you will find, as you have done here, a horse ready saddled."

"Have I anything to pay?" demand- ed D'Artagnan.

"Everything is paid," replied the host, "and liberally. Begone, then, and may God conduct you safely."

"Amen!" cried the young man and set off at full gallop.

It was the same at Neufchatel, at Ecceus and at Pontoise. At the last named place he changed his horse for the last time and at 9 o'clock galloped into the yard of M. de Treville's hotel. He had performed nearly sixty leagues in little more than twelve hours.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Ballet of La Meilaison.

ON the morrow nothing was talk- ed of in Paris but the ball which the aldermen of the city were to give to the king and queen.

At midnight great cries and loud ac- clamations were heard in the city. It was the king, who was passing through the streets which led from the Louvre to the Hotel de Ville and which were all illuminated with colored lamps. Im- mediately the aldermen, clothed in their cloth robes and preceded by six sergeants, holding each a flambeau in his hand, went to attend upon the king, whom they met on the steps, where the provost of the merchants offered him the compliment of welcome. Every- body observed that the king looked dull and preoccupied.

A closet had been prepared for the king with a masquerade habit. The same had been done with respect to the queen.

Before entering his closet the king desired to be informed the moment the cardinal arrived.

Half an hour after the entrance of the king fresh acclamations were heard. These announced the arrival of the queen. She entered the great hall, and it was remarked that, like the king, she looked dull and, moreover, fatigued.

GOLF TWO MILES UP.

Thibet Has the Highest Course In the World.

The chief claim to fame that Gyantse possesses is the part it played in the Thibetan mission of 1904; in time, perhaps, this fame may be eclipsed by the fact that it boasts the highest golf course in the world. The next highest is the course of Gulmerg, in the Himalayas, which is only 8,500 feet above the sea level, but Gyantse, standing at a height of 13,100 feet, easily bears off the palm for golf at a high altitude. Gyantse does not, to the casual observer, suggest golf, nor does it even appear to be able to furnish room for golf courses; but where Scotchmen congregate, though their total number be only three, a course had to be made, and it has been.

Provided the caddies are willing, golf is possible all the year round, the unsuitable months being January, February and March, these being the months of the famous, or rather infamous, dust storms. The course is one of nine holes, situated on the right bank of the Niang Chu River; the average length of the holes is 280 yards, the longest being over 500 yards and the shortest 120 yards. There is no grass on the course, the whole surface being a hard baked clay, over which, especially in winter, a film of sand is blown; where this sand drifts a "bunker" is formed. The chief hazards are collections of stones, pits, withered trees, wild irises and sand out of the two last named not even a Braid could play, and it is here that the advantage of the local rules is seen. Some of these may be of interest:

No ball can be lost in Gyantse; if not found within a reasonable time another is put down where the first one is thought to have been lost, without penalty.

The lie of the ball in sand can be improved by scraping round it with hand or club. (Even then the difficulty of the shot has to be experienced to be appreciated.)

All thorns may be removed from the ball.

An Imprisoned Tailor Strikes.

The latest Australian strike is one of the Gilbertian order. A prisoner in Fremantle prison, a tailor by trade, refused to work on the ground that it would be contrary to his principles as a trade unionist. He sent a letter to the Tailors' Union officially notifying it of his action, but that body expressed neither sympathy nor disapproval, preferring silence.

Population of England.

The census of England and Wales for 1911, the first volume of a detailed report of which is just completed, shows a total population of 36,070,492, with 1,179,276 more females than males. The density of population is 618 to the square mile. It is, of course, the most dense in London, where the population is 38,680 to the square mile.

Bridge Bags.

The wrist bag which the bridge expert carries is becoming a very splendid affair of silk or satin, heavily embroidered with floss or closely incrustated with tiny beads of crystal, pearl or metal. Not infrequently it is of heavy lace, lined with a silken material or with a metallic gauze. One model is a very long and slender affair of lilac velvet appliqued with genuine Irish lace motifs. About its mouth is a narrow edging of the lace, and below that is a pocket, through which runs a cording of mauve silk and silver threads which when drawn taut firmly closes the bag. At its base, where the receptacle is gathered over a small ring, is a long tassel of the same materials as the hanger. The other model, of rose velvet elaborately embroidered with seed pearls, is in saddlebag shape and has mouths opening under huge rings of mother of pearl. Edging both ends and running up the sides as far as the rings is a fringe of pearl beads, and at the corners are balls of seed pearls.

A Shawl For the Baby.

Baby's shawls of flannel or merino with silk binding or hand embroidered scallops or feather stitched in silk or with more elaborate embroidery may be purchased from 75 cents upward. Sometimes they are made with a hood and lined with silk, when they cost $5.50. The silk lining is a distinct disadvantage, as it lessens the warmth of the wrap. The shawls may be knitted or crocheted at home if desired.

To Set the Colors.

If one cupful of vinegar is put with the water in which colored tablecloths are washed it will prevent the color from running. Iron when still damp, and they will look equal to new.

Art muslin curtains should never be washed in warm water. Make a lather with hot water, and when it is nearly cold wash the curtains. If these are green add vinegar; if lilac or pink, ammonia.

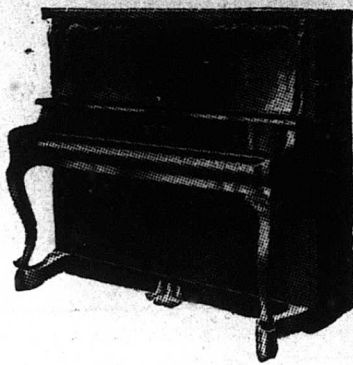

Try This Way.

The next time you prepare your bluing water add a little salt.

This helps to distribute the color and prevents the clothes from becoming streaked or blotched from the bluing.

Grape Mousse.

Soak one tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in a quarter of a cupful of cold water for twenty minutes. Make a cupful of rich grape sirup and add the soaked gelatin, a little lemon juice and a cupful of sugar, or more if you like it very sweet. Strain and chill. Whip a quart of cream and fold the grape mixture in gently. Turn into a mold and pack in ice and coarse salt.

SEASONABLE RECIPES.

Good Things to Eat During the Warm Weather.

Eggplant is delicious when prepared in this way: Boil four eggplants for twenty minutes, cut in halves lengthwise and scoop out the centers and drain on cheesecloth. Mix half a cupful of bread crumbs, quarter of a cupful of chopped cooked chicken, quarter of a cupful of eggplant, two tablespoonfuls of butter, salt, red pepper and one egg. Fill eggplant shells with mixture, cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a slow oven for one hour. Decorate with a sprig of parsley, says the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

With a column cutter or a round apple corer remove a piece from the stem end of half a peck of mangoes. With the handle of a small spoon remove the seeds and soft inner portions. Chop rather less than one-fourth of the mangoes, add one or two

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Merion Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

BAKED EGGPLANT AND SWEET PICKLED MANGOES.

tablespoonfuls of white mustard seed, a sweet red pepper, chopped fine, and if desired a cupful of sultana raisins or cleaned currants. With this mixture fill the mangoes, set the bit removed from the ends in their respective places and push two or three halves of toothpicks through them into the mangoes to hold the piece in place. Care must be taken to put back the piece taken out into the place to which it belongs. Put the mangoes into a receptacle with a scant half cupful of salt, cover with cold water and let stand overnight. Drain, rinse in cold water and set over the fire in cold water. Let boil several minutes or a longer time if a soft pickle be desired. Drain, weigh the pickles, take half the weight in sugar and half a cupful of vinegar for each pound of sugar. Add a little stick cinnamon if desired. Let boil to a sirup. Add the mangoes and let boil five or six minutes, or until soft enough to pierce easily. Store as canned fruit. Green cucumbers, six to eight inches in length and an inch and a half to two inches in diameter, may be prepared in the same way. To serve cut in rather thick slices.

Petticoat From Old Stockings.

This suggestion sounds rather complicated and "seamy," but for the woman who loves to get something out of nothing it may be a help.

Don't throw away your old black stockings when the feet are worn out. Cut the feet off and rip the stockings open at the seams. Then sew them together, keeping the narrow parts together, and of them make the top of your petticoats.

They make excellent stockinette tops for silk ruffled underskirts, that would cost considerable if bought.

After you have sewed the stocking legs together fit them about the hip, sew on a waistband and trim off even around the bottom.

Now make a corded silk ruffle the necessary length and attach it to the stocking top by a French seam. There you have it—a perfectly fitting petticoat at about half the cost of the same ready made.

A hint that the economical woman will be sure to make use of.

Garments From Curtains.

To the eye of the practical woman there is material for a blouse in the pairs of cotton curtains printed with a small pattern and in those of white bordered with a pale tone of a color. The border is used for the lower half of the blouse and for the sleeves from wrist to elbow, and the garment is charming with a white skirt of the tailored type. Equally fetching looking are the negligees to be evolved from a pair of white madras curtains figured over with a design resembling a jolly silk. Wide bands of softest messaline in pale rose or blue border the fronts and the sleeves, and the kimono when worn above a petticoat of the banding material is exceedingly pretty and novel.

POPULARITY OF EPONGE.

Summer Suits of This Material Mod-ish.

Eponge is running serge closely in popularity as a material for summer, and eponge is likely to have a very long inning, for it has a great deal to recommend it as a light and serviceable fabric which looks smart and cool and does not catch the dust quickly. The most popular tones are browns and grays, but one sees also quite a fair sprinkling of navy and lighter blues.

Some of the cotton crapes and voiles and crepon blouses go admirably with eponge tailor makes, and some very smart little hats made to match have been seen.

The hip coat, by which is meant the coat which is a little more than a basque below the waist line, is taking the place of the longer coat which was worn during late winter and

ENJOYING THE BEST OF HEALTH

"Fruit-a-lives" Cured His Rheumatism

Prof. J. F. DAVIS

563 CHURCH ST., TORONTO.

I want to say to the people of Toronto and elsewhere that "Fruit-a-lives" is my only medicine and has been for the last four years. Previous to that, I had been very much troubled with Rheumatism and Kidney Disease, and had taken many remedies as well as employing hot applications of salt bags etc., without getting satisfactory results.

Noticing the advertisement of "Fruit-a-lives", I adopted this treatment altogether and, as everybody knows, since taking "Fruit-a-lives", I have been enjoying the very best health and find it a pleasure to follow my vocation of Dancing and Deportment Instruction.

Prof. J. F. DAVIS.

Prof. Davis, the celebrated teacher of dancing and deportment in Toronto, is quite frank in stating that "Fruit-a-lives" alone cured him of distressing Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble.

The nip coat, which is meant the coat which is a little more than a basque below the waist line, is taking the place of the longer coat which was worn during late winter and early spring. Sometimes the little coat is sack shape, and sometimes a high waist line is defined by a strap across the back and decorative buttons. In some instances buttons are the sole decoration of the plainer tailor made suits, and as there is unending variety of these they are capable of adaptation to almost any kind of costume.

The deep sailor collar of the long pointed shape is more generally seen on wraps and overcoats. Except for the wide revers, the tailor makes have mostly small, neat collars. For young girls' coats there are pretty rounded coat collars, which look very charming with low necked blouses.

It's Fetchingly Girlish.

On slender figures the Norfolk models are particularly graceful, but they emphasize embonpoint unattractively. This trig suit for a girl is of white serge, and the skirt is short enough to show the neat buttoned boot of buckskin. Embroidered white silk gloves and a taffeta trimmed panama hat give the simple suit correctness for the street.

When Pressing.

If you desire to press a dress trimmed with buttons or a packet fastened with hooks and eyes, this suggestion may help you.

Place a heavy bath towel folded several times upon the ironing board.

Arrange your dress, buttons down,
 and over it place a damp cloth.

Iron over this and you will not be able to detect marks or smooth, glossy spots caused by the buttons.

Treat the packet in the same manner.

They Change.

"I am glad to meet you, my little man. I went to school to your mother."
 "And did she ever lick you?"
 "No, indeed."
 "You wouldn't know her now."

Price a Consideration.

"I wonder why some people are such fools!"
 "Probably because it doesn't cost them much to be so."

Always There.

"Which side of the question is your husband on?"
 "I don't know; the wrong side, whichever that is."

No Quick Asset.

A rain in summer easily
 is worth a million, so they say,
 But no one can collect on it Right away.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Between the avaricious man and the spendthrift the distance is so wide that colonies of well considered people occupy it.

Wealth may not bring happiness, but there isn't a great deal of happiness without it in some form.

Serenity is the product of good environment multiplied by a well balanced mind.

And, then, another thing: It takes a man with gumption to get there after he has found a place to go.

The star of progress is likely to begin to get chesty; it has so many enthusiastic followers this season.

The more you cultivate some persons the more highly pernicious they become.

Every dog has his day, but some not satisfied with this insist on lapping over into the night.

The lawn mower has a wicked look to the man who feels he ought to run it these hot days.

It is a pity one can't screen against some people as you do against flies and mosquitoes.

As for the income tax, most of us would be willing to pay it if we could qualify.

A Woman of Nerve.

Miss Dorothy De Vonda, the lady balloonist, stands in a class by herself.
Besides this lady holds the record in altitude flights. Miss De Vonda is like a bird in the air, the higher she goes the better she likes it. Another big feature is the double parachute drop.
She states that she never gives a thought to danger although she has had some very narrow escapes. She feels safer in the monster balloon than she does, when riding on a fast train.
This lady will make one of her famous flights at Picton Fair, Thursday, Sept.
26th.

Tuesday afternoon one of these smart guys who had a skin full of John barleycorn created a disturbance at Smith's corner on Dundas street. Chief Graham did not happen to be near at that time, but Mayor Waller coming along he proceeded to run him in the cooler until his brain cleared. Mayor Waller is to be commended for his action.

The last and best excursion of the season will be by Str. Brockville to Picton Fair on Thursday, Sept. 26th. Can you think of a more enjoyable trip than that of skirting the beautiful shores of the Bay of Quinte to Picton at this season of the year when nature is at her best. And after you reach that good old town a day filled with recreation and pleasure awaits you at the Picton Fair.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The editor of this paper is not a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but just put this in your hat, Deseronto will be a Canadian Northern divisional point. This is not a case of the wish being father to the thought. We got a little bit of information recently that strengthens our belief in the assertion made above.—Deseronto Post. The Post man has another think coming. Napanee is the only place for the divisional point and it will be here.

A rumor is going around 'tween the town that the officials of the C.N.R. have made an offer for Forester Island with the idea of erecting a large summer hotel thereon. The rumor also furnishes the information that the island will be connected with the Prince Edward shore and a ferry established between Deseronto and the Island. Also that it is proposed to make an effort to have the property transferred from the County of Prince Edward to the County of Hastings.

Good Spices for Pickles.

You can't make good pickles unless you get good spices. We have extra selected qualities at "Wallace's Drug Store". Our genuine catsup spice is good. If you have trouble with your catsup spoiling try our preserving powder—it will prevent fermentation. For preserving pears or for marmalade be sure to try our green ginger.

SHOULD HAVE MADE A WILL.

Children Neglect Aged Mother.

A sad case was brought to the attention of a charitable society recently, when they received an application for relief from an elderly woman.

Her husband had been prosperous, but died without leaving any will. The widow did not insist on her rights to a third of the estate, but turned everything over to the children, believing that they would look after her for the balance of her life. She had lived with one after another of her married sons and daughters, and her story of the way in which she was treated causes a very serious reflection on the ingratitude of children.

The main point is, however, that it is not fair for a man to leave an unprotected and inexperienced woman the responsibility of deciding on purely business affairs. It was the plain duty of the husband, as it is the duty of every person, to make a will. There is no excuse, because it is no longer necessary to employ a lawyer or incur large expense—the BAX Will Forms can be obtained for 35 cents. Accompanying each form is a specimen will, properly filled out and full instructions for your guidance.

The Bax Will Form filled out and witnessed by two friends is absolutely binding and indisputable.

For sale by all druggists and stationers, or sent on receipt of 35 cents by the BAX Will Form Company, 280 College street, Toronto. For sale by A. E. Paul, Napanee.

Try the new spray for potatoes, "Arsenate of Lead." It prevents blight, does not injure the vines, is not easily washed off by the rain, and saves your money. You can get the right kind at Hooper's—Napanee's Largest Drug Store.

The heaviest rain of the year fell in Manitoba Friday night to a depth of 3.40 inches. Saturday it was followed by sleet and snow, according to report from Arborg, Man.

A delightful days outing and one full of pleasure and instruction awaits those who take in the Str. Brockville's excursion to Picton Fair on Thursday, Sept. 26th. The directors are using every effort this year to make the Fair bigger and better than ever, and already the demand for space far exceeds the capacity of the main building, which has necessitated the procuring of an immense tent, 60x80. Where one of the finest exhibit of apples ever made at a county fair will be shown. The attractions will also be more interesting than ever this year, the most thrilling being the balloon ascension by Dorothy De Vonda, the world's greatest aeronaut. An interesting feature in connection with the ascensions given by Miss De Vonda, are the prizes given by the directors of Picton Fair. Each ascension, from a height of 1000 feet or more Miss De Vonda distributes 1500 tickets numbered from 1 to 1500. To persons presenting tickets bearing numbers corresponding with ones previously selected and placed in a sealed envelope by a disinterested party, will be given a $9.00 set of books free of charge, and cash prizes of $3.00, $2.00 and $1.00. Music for the days events will be furnished by the Sunny South Minstrel Band.]
